Welcome to the Analog Series, a captivating exploration of the intersection between technology and human experience, rendered through a collection of evocative oil paintings. This series delves into the visual language of 1990s computer code and DOS command lines, capturing them in solitary settings that resonate with nostalgia and introspection.

Each painting invites viewers into intimate scenes—a dimly lit bar, a cozy couch, a moving train—where the stark and mechanical nature of vintage code contrasts beautifully with the warmth of human emotion. These solitary environments reflect moments of contemplation and connection, urging us to consider our relationship with technology in an era increasingly defined by digital interaction.

Through vibrant colors and textured brushwork, the Analog Series emphasizes the beauty of the past while inviting reflections on our present digital landscape. Join us on this journey as we revisit the often-overlooked aesthetics of early computing and the profound solitude it can transmit in both physical and virtual worlds.

Step into the world of the Omnicorp Series, a vibrant collection of oil paintings that captures the energy of city life and the pulse of the modern era.

Each piece in the Omnicorp Series weaves together architectural complexity, street art influences, and striking visual motifs, creating a dynamic dialogue between the built environment and artistic expression. The layered compositions and bold aesthetics highlight the rhythm of city streets, where graffiti, advertisements, and digital media converge to shape our surroundings.

Through a rich palette and intricate brushwork, the Omnicorp Series captures the vibrancy, chaos, and beauty of modern urban life. This collection offers a unique perspective on the fusion of city energy, artistic rebellion, and digital influence, inviting viewers to reflect on the visual language of our time.

Discover the «Stay at Home Series,» a poignant collection of 6 hand-made silk screen prints that captures the essence of solitude and reflection during the unprecedented times of the COVID-19 pandemic. This series encapsulates the intimate and often isolating experiences people faced while confined at home, transforming those moments into compelling visual narratives.

Each print portrays distinctive solitary situations—whether it's a canceled concert ticket, the tranquility of reading a book in a tub, or sharing a hotel lobby with a cat. These images serve as a testament to the resilience of the human spirit and the unexpected revelations that arose amid isolation.

Utilizing the vibrant and dynamic techniques of silk screening, the «Stay at Home Series» evokes a sense of both nostalgia and connection, inviting viewers to reflect on their own experiences during this unique chapter in history. Through this art, we celebrate the small moments of beauty and introspection that emerged while navigating the challenges of staying home. Join us in exploring this series that resonates with shared experiences of solitude, creativity, and ultimately, hope.
